SHOULD THE WOMEN VOTE

High School Boys to Settle This Serious Question Wednesday Night.

TABERNACLE JUNE 3RD.

Henry Clay Debating Society Has a Treat In Store.

The annual open session of the Henry Clay Debating Society will be held at the tabernacle Wednesday night, June 3d. This is the gold medal contest given by the Board of Trustees. The event has always been hotly contested and this year it will be warmer than ever. The boys have chosen the most prominent issue before the public today, the question of Woman Suffrage. They have worked long and hard on the subject and it will be a sure enough debate throughout from the shoulder. The question permits of a wealth of argument on both sides and is sure to be interspersed with wit and humor.

One additional feature this year is the music by Lebkeuer's Orchestra. There will be several musical numbers on the program. There will also be given to each person attending, a beautiful souvenir program of the commencement exercises. These things together with the beautiful decorations, will make it well worth while to attend. A large crowd is expected and it is safe to say they will be as well pleased with the entertainment as at previous High School entertainments. Admission, adults 25c, children 10c.

The biggest package of paint satisfaction ever sold is what you get in every can of Green Seal. Lander Bros., Newstead, Ky.

CURRENCY BILL PUT THROUGH

Trickery Resorted to to Squelch Opposition.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS.

Aldrich Triumphs By Quick Action In Securing Rollcall.

Washington, D. C. June 1.—The Senate passed the Aldrich-Vreeland currency bill by a vote of 43 to 22, this action being taken Saturday after a day devoted to filibustering against the measure. Senators Stone of Missouri and Gore of Oklahoma occupied the time of the Senate after 7:03 o'clock Friday morning, when Mr. La Follette retired. Mr. La Follette broke the record for long speeches, holding the floor continuously for eighteen hours and forty-three minutes.

When Gore quit speaking, a piece of quick action by Aldrich and the Vice-President, started a rollcall and ended the filibuster.

The Senate passed what is known as the omnibus territorial bill. The measure was called up by Mr. Beveridge.

Congress adjourned shortly afterwards.

MORE MOVES IN SHERIFF MUDDLE

Circuit Clerk C. R. Clark Issues Restraining Order.

SET ASIDE YESTERDAY.

Everybody Now Waiting to Hear From Court of Appeals.

Another move was made in the sheriff's case Saturday, when J. M. Renshaw's attorneys secured a temporary injunction from Circuit Clerk C. R. Clark, restraining Sheriff David Smith, Democrat, from discharging duties of office. The case will come before Judge Cook this week. There have been several injunction suits and counter-suits filed in this case, and the court of appeals has had the tangled questions before it twice. Judge Cook recently issued a writ of prohibition to prevent County Judge Prowse, who removed Smith from office, from sitting in injunction proceedings. Renshaw's attorneys then applied to the appellate court for a writ of prohibition against Judge Cook. The decision of the higher court has not been handed down but is expected to-day or to-morrow.

Yesterday Judge Cook set aside the order issued by the circuit clerk in his absence and recognized Sheriff Smith as the legal sheriff. The decision from Frankfort is expected to-day or to-morrow.

GRAND JURY EMPEALED

And Christian Circuit Court Is Now Ready For Business.

MR. SMITH AS SHERIFF.

Judge Cook's Instructions Were Strong and To The Point.

Circuit Court convened yesterday morning and Judge Cook's first order was to set aside the restraining order issued by Circuit Clerk Clark Saturday and order that the records show that he recognized Sheriff David Smith as Sheriff. Mr. Smith and his deputies, L. C. Cravens and Jewel W. Smith were then sworn in.

The grand jurors had been summoned by John M. Renshaw, the Republican claimant, and to remedy this informality Sheriff Smith summoned the same panel in open court. Sixteen names were called:

Ernest Higgins was ineligible and three were absent. The jury as made up was as follows:

Wm. Dudley, John Southall, Bud Sharer, Harry Edwards, R. L. Moore, R. W. Harris, A. R. Cook, R. H. Kelly, Alex Shaw, B. P. Alexander, Tommy (T.A.) King and G.W. Orange.

The court's instructions to the jury were stronger, clearer and more to the point than at either the January or March courts. He covered every phase of night riding, read the statutes, explained the different offenses and pointed out that there was no bar to the prosecution. Men once guilty would not be immune from punishment as long as they lived. He disclosed that night riding was disgracing Kentucky and sounding the death knell of the Association under whose cover these crimes were committed, as he believed, without the endorsement of the Association. He believed the Association should do all in its power to break up the lawlessness charged to it. No organization, however deserving, can endure by illegal means. He designated Mr. Kelly as foreman.

FARMERS FALL OUT

And One Man is Shot Three Times.

James A. King, son of Mr. S. T. King, of the Barlow neighborhood, was shot three times by "Tody" Hord, of the same section, Sunday. The wounds are not considered serious. Two of the balls passed through King's right arm and the third one struck the hip and glanced around. One of the bullets which passed through the arm entered his side.

It seems that the young men had some trouble the day before and when they met in the road Sunday the quarrel was renewed, with the above result. No warrant had been sworn out up to yesterday morning and it is likely that the grand jury which convened yesterday, will at once investigate the shooting.

AGED CITIZEN

Passes Away After a Very Brief Illness.

Mr. Wm. M. Bradshaw, of Ballard county, died near Pembroke, aged 79 years. He was a native of this country, but moved to Ballard many years ago. Mr. Bradshaw was here on a visit to relatives, accompanied by his wife, when taken ill. He was a brother of Mr. Edgar Bradshaw and the late Benjamin Bradshaw and was a member of the Christian church. The interment took place in the Rawlins burying ground, near Salubria.

SHERIFF CONVINCED

That More Bodies Are On Gunness Farm.

Laporte, Ind., May 28.—Several hogs wallowing in the pond at the edge of a lot on the Gunness farm near here, this morning, brought up a bone of a human arm. The finding of the bone has convinced Sheriff Smutzer that other bodies have been buried beneath the mud at the bottom of the pond. The entire shore will be gone over with long rakes in an effort to bring any bodies to the surface.

CAN'T SCARE HIM.

Owingsville, Ky., May 28.—Shelby Goodpastor, two miles west of this town, received last night written notice not to attempt to raise tobacco under severe penalty. The warning was signed night riders. Mr. Goodpastor was one of very few who proposed to raise tobacco in county this year, and says he will defy night riders at any cost. He is past eighty years of age.

CAN'T DENY IT.

If This Had Happened in San Francisco Instead of Hopkinsville More Than One Reader Might Doubt It.

The average man is a doubter. This is not surprising—the public have been humbugged so frequently they are skeptical. Proof like the following will stand investigation. It can't be disputed.

Mrs. Francis Brown, 204 Fourth street, corner mechanic street, Hopkinsville, Ky., says: "There is no doubt about Doan's Kidney Pills being all that is claimed for them and you are at liberty to use my name to that effect. I was annoyed for years with backache which came on by spells, especially when I contracted cold which always settled in my kidneys, causing severe pains across my back and down through the loins. About four years ago, I was induced to try Doan's Kidney Pills procurer them at L. A. Johnson & Co.'s drug store. I was not disappointed in the results obtained, for after taking a dose or two I knew they acted directly on the kidneys and in a short time the trouble ceased. I suppose during the past four years I have appealed to them some six or seven times, and I can candidly state that in each case they have given me quick and lasting relief. Mr. Brown also used them with equally good results. We both think a great deal of Doan's Kidney Pills and keep them in the house most of the time."

I was not disappointed in the results obtained, for after taking a dose or two I knew they acted directly on the kidneys and in a short time the trouble ceased. I suppose during the past four years I have appealed to them some six or seven times, and I can candidly state that in each case they have given me quick and lasting relief. Mr. Brown also used them with equally good results. We both think a great deal of Doan's Kidney Pills and keep them in the house most of the time."

—FOR CONGRESS—

HENDERSON, KY.

The Weather.

FOR KENTUCKY.—Probably showers and warmer Tuesday.

The red-hot campaign for Governor of Georgia between Gov. Smith and Joe M. Brown will be settled in the Democratic primary June 4.

Samuel Salyer, of Wise county, Va., is 115 years old and is in good health, active, and is still a crack shot with a rifle.

All factions of the Democratic party in Louisville have buried the hatchet and will send an agreed delegation to the State Convention June 11.

The real meeting of the White House conference of Governors and other citizens, held on May 13-15, at the invitation of President Roosevelt, is set forth editorially in the June Review of Reviews. Just why the conference was called, and what line of action were developed are clearly stated. The newspaper reader who may have been more or less confused by the daily reports of the proceedings will find in the Review an illuminating summary of the whole matter.

The State Journal says the friends of the 19 men indicted at Shelbyville for night riding "are confident a serious mistake has been made and the grand jury imposed upon by some zealous Law and Order League" because of the fact that they are "among the most substantial and respected citizenship of the country." There are still other surprises in store before the State and Federal court courts bring out all of the hidden secrets of the night riders.

The Clarksville merchants and officials who have compromised with those assuming to raise a boycott instituted against the city by unknown writers signing themselves "N. R.", may or may not profit by their surrender. How do they know that the Peace Treaty submitted by Mr. Folk Prince and others will be accepted by the N. R. boycotters with any more binding force than was the agreement entered into between the tobacco buyers of Hopkinsville and the Day Riders three weeks before the raid on this city? Is there any guarantee that the Night Riders can be controlled by the farmers, after the city has withdrawn its defenses? We shall see.

Five States.

Five States will hold Democratic Conventions this week to elect national delegates to the Denver Convention—Nevada at Carson City today, Idaho at Twin Falls, Louisiana at Baton Rouge and Maryland at Baltimore on Wednesday, and Utah at Salt Lake City on Saturday. Democratic primaries will be held in Virginia on Thursday.

Jefferson Davis Day.

Wednesday will be observed throughout Virginia as a holiday in honor of the centennial of the birth of Jefferson Davis. On that day the Davis monument erected in Richmond by the Jefferson Davis Monument Association will be formally given to the city.

A CASE OF IDENTITY.

"It's a great help to be able to size up the men you come in contact with," said a business man to his son; "but it's more important still that you should know yourself."

For instance. A noisy bunch 'ack' up their club late one night, and up the street. They stopped in front of an imposing residence. After considerable discussion one of them pounded on the door. A woman stuck her head out of a second-story window and demanded, none too sweetly: What do you want?

"Ish this the residence of Mr. Smith?" inquired the man on the steps, with an elaborate bow.

"Ish it possible I have the honor shpeakin' to Missus Shmith?"

"Yes what do you want?"

"Dear Missus Shmith! Good Missus Shmith! Will you—hic—come down an' pick out Mr. Shmith? The rest of us want to go home."—Everybody's Magazine.

TESTING LOCOMOTIVES.

How a New Engine is Broken In For Its Destined Work.

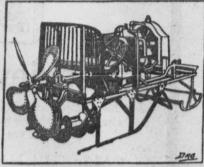

A thorough test before it is sent out on the road to determine its value. When a new engine is taken into a shop it is turned over to a mechanic whose duty it is to fit it up and make all connections and adjustments of the interior mechanism, says Scientific American. This completed, the engine is turned over to another, who fits it up and blows it off in order to remove any grease that may have accumulated in the boiler or such foreign substances as might cause a boiler to "boom" while in service. The engine is then turned over to an engineer, who puts it through a series of tests. The engine is steamed up again and if it will run it is taken for a little try-out about the yard.

If all goes well and there is no heating in the journals or brasses, the engine is worked for a few hours, and then sent out on a long distance trip at a speed varying from one to twenty miles an hour and drawing about half its full load.

Heating is one of the principal difficulties of an engine, and it is this feature that causes the most trouble to the experimenter. The experienced engineer is so well educated that he can detect the least defect about his engine.

an hour. The vehicle is built almost entirely of light metal and for power has a two-cylinder air-cooled horsepower motor of the usual type.

The propelling medium consists of a four-bladed aerial screw made of aluminum, the blades being tipped with steel bands, and an Archimedean screw which helps out on hill climbing. The aerial blades are made spoon shaped "to catch the wind like a sail," as the inventor says. Steering is accomplished by guiding the forward runners with an ordinary steering wheel and gear. The machine is adapted to operate on rods which are in pretty fair condition.—Popular Mechanics.

round the inner court of the castle. The castle was solidly built of gray stone, a businesslike old hill fortress, strong by reason of its massive masonry and of the position in which it stood. Considered as a modern residence it had to be treated humorously; so it was entered, and found much pleasure in it from that point of view. The prince, it always seemed to physical comfort and even aversion from luxury, probably did not realize how much his ancestral strength had demanded of his guests' indulgence. Old Vassip, Peter's father, was master of all Slavna's household, kitchen, and high officials. His old wife was cook. Half a dozen servants took care of the establishment, and of these three were grooms. The horses, in fact, seemed to Max the only creatures whose comfort were at all on a modern footing. But the prince was the only creature satisfied and never so happy anywhere as in Pravilov. He took it very simple, hardy. He loved even more, though perhaps less consciously, the sense of being among friends. He would not yield an inch to court popularity in Slavna, but his heart went out to meet the unsought devotion of Volsen, the mountain town and its surrounding villages, a sentiment not restrained in Slavna, here he was open, gay and full of an almost boisterous ardor.

"It's worth coming here just to see its effect on you," Max told him as the two rode back together from Volsen on the day of Sophie's arrival. They had been at work, and the recruiting process was over.

The prince laughed easily. "Coming from Slavna is like fresh air after an oven," he said. "No need to watch your tongue or other people's! You can laugh when you like and frown when you like without a dozen people asking what's your motive for doing it."

"But you wouldn't have chosen a soldier for your companion, sir, if you feel like that."

"I haven't," he smiled. "I've left the diplomat down there and brought the soldier up. And now that the ladies are coming—"

"Ah, now we must watch our tongues! Little boy!" Zerkovitch is very proper, and the baroness might make me absolutely poetical!"

Least prying of men, yet Max von Hollbrandt could not resist sending with this speech a glance at his companion. The visit of the baroness compelled this much tribute to curiosity. But the prince's face was a picture of uneasiness.

"I can be poetical! We'll all be poetical!" he cried merrily. "In the intervals of drilling it will be understood!" he added, with a laugh.

Into this atmosphere, physical and moral—the exhilaration of keen mountain breezes, the exultation of victory, the dash of the high horse, and of high spirits—came Sophie, with all her power of enjoying and her ardor in intriguing. Her mind leaped from the sad embraces of the past to fly to the arms of the present, to becom Gladly to the future. No more than this had yet emerged into the consciousness of the prince, as he gazed with admiration at the girl's bright eyes. She had no idea of what she was doing, nor was she afraid or was to stand toward the prince. Fortune had done wonderful things for her and was doing more yet. That was enough, and beyond that for the moment she was not driven.

The mixture of poetry and drilling sent a thrill through her. She got both when she rode over to Volsen with the prince. Crisp snow covered the ground and covered, too, the roofs of the old gray, hillside city—long, sloping roofs, with here and there a round tower with a snow clad extinguisher-tap. The snow was high here, and of high spirit—came Sophie, with all her power of enjoying and her ardor in intriguing. Her mind leaped from the sad embraces of the past to fly to the arms of the present, to becom Gladly to the future. No more than this had yet emerged into the consciousness of the prince, as he gazed with admiration at the girl's bright eyes. She had no idea of what she was doing, nor was she afraid or was to stand toward the prince. Fortune had done wonderful things for her and was doing more yet. That was enough, and beyond that for the moment she was not driven.

At the city gate bread and salt were brought to the soldier and his companion. Max, and she and he rode side by side down the long street to the market place. Here were two or three hundred tall, fine fellows waiting their leader. Drill had not yet brought for mality. On the sight of him they gave a cheer and ran to form a ring about him. Many caught him by the hand and pressed or kissed it. But Sophie claimed their eyes. It was very cold. She wore a short jacket of cable over her habit and a round cap of the same felt fabric. Her hands were at the pitch of pleasure and excitement.

In a moment a quick witted fellow divined who she was. "The lady who saved him! The lady who saved him!" he cried in the full pitch of his voice. The prince turned pale, and the soldier saluted her. "Yes, this lady who saved me," he said. Sophie had the cheers now, and they rode to her head with fumes of intoxication. It may be guessed how the red star glowed!

"And you'll save him if need be!" cried the cried quite indifferently. The prince nodded his head, and the answer was an unshuttered cheer. The heart of Slavna was a recommendation to Volsen's increased regard, the hint of danger a match to his fiery enthusiasm.

"A favor, bairif, a favor!" cried a young man of distinguished appearance. All the soldiers had their knapsacks and to carry weight, for there were shouts of "Hear Lukovitch! Hear Lukovitch!" and one called, with a laugh, "Aye, listen to the Wolf!"

"What is it, Lukovitch?" asked the prince.

"Make the lady of our company, bairif!" New cheers were raised. "Make her a lieutenant of our artillery."

Sophy laughed gayly. "I have little of my father's authority to choose my officer," said the prince, smiling. "Baroness, will you be a lieutenant and wear our sheepskins in place of your sables there?"

"It is your uniform, monsieur."

Sophy answered, bowing her head.

Lukovitch sprang forward and kissed her hands.

"For our bairif's preserver as for our bairif, men of Volsen!" he cried loudly.

The answering cheer brought tears to Sophie's sparkling eyes. For a moment she could not see her prince nor the men who took her to their hearts.

Suddenly in the midst of the excitement of the thing a small, spare man stood there, dressed in unobtrusive tweeds, but making no effort to conceal himself. He was just looking on, a stranger to the town, interested in the picturing of the scene. The face was that of Lieutenant Rastatz.

Sawed the drilling of the gunners and then rode back with the prince, expert beyond compare, in the clearing of the woods, through which had now been joined by many women. Dusk was falling, and the old gray city took on a ghostly look. The glory of the sunshine had departed. Sophie shivered a little beneath her furs.

"Monsieur, did you see Rastatz?" she asked.

"No; I didn't see him, but he was here. Lukovitch told me yesterday."

"And not in uniform?"

"He has leave, no doubt, and his uniform won't make his stay in Volsen any more pleasant."

"Is he here for there?" she asked fretfully.

"Ah, baroness, you must inquire of those who sent him, I think." His tone was light and merry.

"To spy on you, I suppose? I hate his being there. He—he isn't worthy to be in dear Volsen!"

"You and Sophie have fallen in love, I see," he said. "As for myself, all I'm doing I do openly and all I shall do, but I don't blame Stenovics for keeping an eye on me, or Stenovics either. I do my best to keep an eye on them, you know. We needn't be afraid of Rastatz, we who have beaten Hercules Mifstach."

"There's not a frozen—shean beside her. The dark mass of the tower of Prasiek rose too soon before her unwilling eyes. She drew reign, sighing.

"If life were just all that and nothing else," she said, as he helped her to dismount, "the groans took the wind out of her lungs and she stopped halfway up the steep wooden causeway and turned to look back toward Volsen. The prince stood close by her.

Merely they cantered through the fast falling evening side by side. Rastatz was out of mind now. All was out of mind now. The girl's face was flushed with the effort of the climb, and the light, her prince who rode beside her. The dark mass of the tower of Prasiek rose too soon before her unwilling eyes. She drew reign, sighing.

"That's good, but life has better things," he said softly. "To ride together is good and to play together, but to work together is better still, baroness."

For a moment Sophie was silent. Then she laughed in joy.

"Well, I'm to wear your uniform henceforth, monsieur!"

He drew her hand and kissed it. Very slowly and gradually she drew it away, her eyes meeting his as he rode on. At last the causeway opened. Marie Zerkovitch stood there, holding a lamp high in her hand. The sudden light flooded their faces. For a moment he looked at her, then went down again on his way to the stables. So quickly ran up to where Marie Zerkovitch stood.

"You heard our horses?" she asked gayly.

But there was no responsive smile on Marie's lips. For her, too, the light had shone on those two faces, and she was sorely troubled.

The next day again they rode together, and Sophie trembled, Max von Hollbrandt shrugged his shoulders with a laugh, and little Rastatz drove back to Slavna through the night. He thought that he had seen enough for his purposes. His report might be useful in the city of the Krath.

On the sight of him the girls gave a cheer and ran to form a ring about him. Many caught him by the hand and pressed or kissed it. But Sophie claimed their eyes. It was very cold. She wore a short jacket of cable over her habit and a round cap of the same felt fabric. Her hands were at the pitch of pleasure and excitement.

In a moment a quick witted fellow divined who she was. "The lady who saved him! The lady who saved him!" he cried in the full pitch of his voice. The prince turned pale, and the soldier saluted her. "Yes, this lady who saved me," he said. Sophie had the cheers now, and they rode to her head with fumes of intoxication. It may be guessed how the red star glowed!

"And you'll save him if need be!" cried the cried quite indifferently. The prince nodded his head, and the answer was an unshuttered cheer. The heart of Slavna was a recommendation to Volsen's increased regard, the hint of danger a match to his fiery enthusiasm.

"A favor, bairif, a favor!" cried a young man of distinguished appearance.

All the soldiers had their knapsacks and to carry weight, for there were shouts of "Hear Lukovitch! Hear Lukovitch!" and one called, with a laugh,

"Aye, listen to the Wolf!"

"What is it, Lukovitch?" asked the prince.

time was short! That was the ruling thought and the governing fact. It might be very short, and the end might come without warning. The secret was well kept, but to those to whom he spoke at all it was a secret.

The king life hung on a thread, which least accident might break. With perfect quiet and tranquility he might live a year, possibly two years.

Any shock or overstrain would precipitate the end.

Countess Ellenburg and her confidential friends knew this, the king knew himself, and Lepage, his valet, knew it, too, in the possession of the secret stopped.

The king was gay and courageous. Courage, at least, he had never lacked. He seemed almost indifferent. The best years were over, he said, and why not an end? An end swift, without pain.

Without waiting, there was no time to be lost. Lukovitch agreed with his master and told him in his usual frank bluntness. They agreed together not to cry about it, and the king went fishing still. But the time was short, and he pushed on his one great idea with a zeal and an earnestness foreign to his earlier habit. He would see his son married, and then everything would be well.

He would see the great marriage in train, the marriage which was to establish forever the rank and prestige of the house of Stefanovitch. The Prince of Slavna must set forth on his travels, seeking a wife. The king even designed a princess of most becoming appearance as the first object of his son's attentions or pursuit.

With an unusual perceptiveness and an unusual independence he sent Stenovics orders to communicate his wishes directly to the prince. Stenovics received the royal memorandum on the day on which Lieutenant Rastatz received his orders to go to Volsen.

The King of Slavna had observed his son's glance shamed.

He was glad to see his son's eyes brighten again.

At first sight the king's commands were totally at variance with the interests of the Ellenburg coterie and with the progress of their great plan.

They did not want the house of Stefanovitch strengthened and glorified in the person of his present heir apparent, and they did not want the prince to be considered as well and the gunners training at Volsen. These were the guns to be considered as well and the gunners training at Volsen. These would be sources of strength and prestige to the prince, not less valuable, more tangible, than even a great nation.

And now the king had sent his son off with his master and his tutor, and nothing more to his master than his travel expenses.

When the short time ended he might be far away. Finally he might go and yet take nothing by his journey.

The exalted princess would be hard to win.

The king's family pride might defeat itself by making the prince pitch his master in open competition with the whole, the matter was difficult.

The three chief conspirators showed their conviction of this in their characteristic ways. Countess Ellenburg became more plow than ever; General Stenovics more silent, at least more prone to restrict his conversation and interested in life. He, too, was fishing and in his favorite woods, and he had hopes of a big rise.

THE CHIEF OF POLICE

Engages in Fatal Duel and Kills Patrolman Who Slew Woodburn.

SOUGHT TO ARREST HIM

J.R. Wooten, of Central City, Forced to Shoot John W. Harmon.

Central City, Ky., May 29.—John W. Harmon, a policeman, shot and instantly killed Charles Woodburn and seriously wounded J.R. Wooten, the chief of police, and in turn was so badly wounded by Wooten that he died within twenty minutes.

The tragedy occurred near the Illinois Central railroad station, near which are located all of the saloons of the city and several restaurants. The fight began on the sidewalk between Rabbe's restaurant and May's saloon, not fifty yards from the spot where Jas. D. Wood, the labor leader, and two other men were killed in a similar affray several weeks ago.

The three men met on the street and soon became engaged in a violent quarrel. After a war of words all three reached for their weapons and began to shoot. Woodburn fell at the first fire, a ball piercing his heart and causing instant death. Wooten and Harmon continued to shoot at each other, both being hit several times, and Harmon lived less than half an hour after the fight began. Wooten is dangerously wounded.

Wooten is a man about 40 years of age. He was recently made chief of police as a result of the shake-up in the force following the election of a new city council, of which James D. Wood was a leading spirit. The difficulty which resulted in Wood's death arose out of the shift in police officers.

Harmon was a man 50 years of age and had been on the police force for many years, doing duty at night. Woodburn was the youngest of the three, being about 35 years of age. He was employed in a local restaurant.

Developments show that J.W. Harmon was on duty when Chief of Police Wooten came down town and Harmon ordered him to go home. Wooten got Woodburn to go with him, it is supposed, to arrest Harmon when the shooting began.

BAD FEELING.

From the best information obtainable there had been bad feeling between Chief Wooten and Harmon since the killing of the Wood brothers one month ago. Harmon was shot seven times.

Woodburn died in a few minutes after being carried to the Hays restaurant, and Wooten was carried to his home with a pistol wound in the groin and another in the leg. He will recover barring unforeseen complications setting up.

All were men of families, Wooten having three children, two married. Harmon leaves a wife and five children and had recently taken charge of the Commercial Hotel here, and Woodburn leaves a wife and three children, his daughter being employed in the Singer machine office here.

Woodburn was formerly a member of the Executive Board in District 23, United Mine Workers, but had been in the employ of Hays in his restaurant for the past year. The wives and daughters of the two dead men are prostrated with grief. No one could be found who knew who began the shooting, but the coroner's inquest, which will take place later o-day, may disclose particulars.

MANY CAUGHT IN DRAGNET.

True Bills Found Against Twenty-six Alleged Raiders.

KRONE APPEALS TO GOV.

Nineteen In Shelby and Seven in Harrison Counties Indicted.

Shelbyville, Ky., May 29.—The Shelby county grand jury adjourned sine die this afternoon, after returning nineteen indictments against men charged with night riding.

Eight indictments were returned against farmers residing in the northeastern part of Shelby county, charging complicity in the Elmsburg raid, when night riders visited the store of Hall Bros., at Elmsburg, and compelled one of the proprietors to burn all the tobacco canvas he carried in stock.

The Shelby county men indicted are George Ethington, James Stivers, John Wood, William Kemper, Lewis Ethington, Jake Smithers, and two counts against Levi Smithers. Eleven indictments were also returned against residents of Franklin county, living near the Shelby county line, for participating in the Jacksonville raid of May 21. The men indicted are Robert Quire, Arch Moore, Duard Bryant, Rufus Bryant, Eugene Bryant, Wyatt Phillips, James Moore, Leslie Phillips, John Hulett, Lee Moore and Sam Moore. Bench warrants were issued for all the men indicted, and bond was fixed at $500 each for their appearance at the October term of the Circuit Court.

In addition to these it is understood that eight other men are also indicted, but the officials of the court will not affirm the report, nor will they say who the others are.

The work of the grand jury had been greatly aided by the excellent support given by the court officers. In its charge recently Judge Marshall impressed on the jurors the necessity for publishing those who were in any way implicated in the night rider raids. All of those arrested have given bond.

SEVEN INDICTMENTS.

Harrison Grand Jury Accuses Alleged Night Riders.

Cynthiana, Ky., May 29.—After being in session since Monday investigating the charges of night riding against several citizens of Bracken and Robertson counties which took place in Harrison county, the grand jury returned indictments against W. A. Kenton, Charles Fowler, Ben Hammond, Will Brown, Ollie Hester, John Woodward, white, and Gun McGee, colored, on charges of conspiring. Three of the men indicted were captured several weeks ago by Sheriff Gregg and a posse, after an all-night chase, following the capture of Marcial Hale, a farmer of Bracken county, and the destruction of his tobacco. All the white men indicted are well-to-do citizens of Bracken and Robertson counties.

The best class of Laundry wearers in Hopkinsville are giving The Hopkinsville Steam Laundry their work, and why? Simply because the cost of Laundering collars and cuffs is from 1¢ to 1½¢ lower than Nashville or Evansville; then they do not get yellow, dirty looking goods to wear, like you get from a Celestial Laundry, but you get that delicate pearl tint of a color, so much desired by every genteel dresser. In fact, with the improved machinery installed within the last few months by The Hopkinsville Steam Laundry, very few plants in any of the country are equal. This Laundry has done more to advertise Hopkinsville than all else combined. Any traveling man will tell you that Hopkinsville is known more by its Laundry industry and the fine Hotel than all else. Of course 'tis understood that we have the best town on earth and the Laundry and the Hotel are just a part of it.
